good houses brings together the design process building science and the environmental systems that can be used by both teachers and students in teaching and learning about designing good responsible houses the book approaches housing design holistically by taking its environment as the starting point integrating design processes more closely with architectural science and environmental systems any building design can only be successful if these two aspects among others are considered as early as possible in the design process and inform the designer throughout the design process the book does not provide prescriptions or definitive answers on what is the best way to design a house instead it aims to provide a structured way of what to consider at the different stages of the design process and the potential implications of the decisions made throughout this process it aligns sustainable design principles with the stages in the design process and provides guidance on how these can be connected using international examples to illustrate the concepts from a wide range of climatic conditions the book is illustrated in full colour with over 200 plans sections diagrams and photographs it is essential reading for those designing residential projects the energy used to operate buildings is one of the most significant sources of greenhouse gas emissions to lessen the human impact on climate it is necessary to reduce these building related emissions new legislation as well as market and financial pressures are driving architects and developers to create low carbon buildings while it is possible to achieve many of these reductions through appropriate climate responsive design many architects are not trained to do this filling an urgent need for a design reference in this emerging field carbon neutral architectural design describes how to reduce building related greenhouse gas emissions through appropriate design techniques this full color book presents strategies and methods to achieve co2 reductions with an emphasis on control of energy flows through the building envelope and passive heating and cooling strategies strategies for designing buildings with a smaller carbon footprint examining climate change and its relationship with buildings the book begins with a look at the sources of emissions and how these are produced as a result of interactions between buildings and the surrounding environment it then introduces a carbon neutral architectural design process cndp and a roadmap that can be adjusted for different types of projects discussing climate analysis and solar geometry the book explores how understanding the climate where a building is located helps to identify the design strategies that are best suited to that location whether warm and humid warm and dry temperate or cold it looks at psychrometrics and how to achieve thermal comfort with minimum emissions the book also explains how building fabric can be used to control energy flows by conduction radiation and convection helping to reduce overheating and overcooling and how to incorporate passive cooling and heating systems through appropriate design the book includes useful references equations and illustrations as well as a comparison of free carbon counting tools that can be used for residential building design drawing on the author s extensive experience in teaching and practice this is a valuable resource for anyone who wants to reduce the carbon footprint of buildings find more study resources at the american institute of architects carbon neutral design project web site what s next for green building see what dr la roche has to say in this video on the hmc architects blog
